WHAT ARE YOU DOING FOR SIXMASS?

This question appeared while I doom scrolled in advance of the Six Nations Rugby. Six nations gave rise to a period of time called Sixmass.

The season we are about to begin could well be called Sixmass, given there are six Sundays within it, and apart from the extra few days of Ash Wednesday, Lent is largely now a six-week event.

The more common name for Lent, however, we could say is Fortymass. In Latin 'Quadragesima', giving rise to Irish 'Carghas', French 'Carême', Italian 'Quaresima'. Other languages focus on the fasting aspect (Polish has 'Great Fast' - Wielkipost) while English simply calls it springtime, or the lengthening (Lent-) of daytime. Fortymass comes from the Lord's for days in the desert and the Hebrews' forty years in another desert. The Lord's was a time of preparation, as should our Lent be.

Sixmass comes from the Sundays of Lent which had stages of preparation for baptism - the first sacramental participation in the Lord's paschal mystery. The first two Sundays of Lent employ the Lord's temptation in the desert and the Transfiguration. This year, 2026, uses cycle A of our readings at Sunday Mass, which means Sundays 3, 4 and 5 have readings particularly suitable for baptismal preparation. The Samaritan woman at the well seeking the water of life is followed by the curing of blindness which in turn is followed by the raising of Lazarus. Baptism offers the Lord satisfying our eternal thirst, illuminates our minds with the faith and offers eternal life.

Ash Wednesday is for Roman Catholics a day of both fasting for 18-59 year olds (one meal, two snacks) and abstinence from meat for over 14 year olds. Catholics of other traditions – e.g. Syro Malabar, Syro Malankar, Coptic, and Ukrainians, etc. who begin Lent on Monday – do not observe Ash Wednesday and are not obliged to our practices. Ukrainians gave up meat for Lent a week ago, and eat dairy products for the last time this Sunday until Easter.

What is the purpose of the forty days or six Sundays? Lent was originally a preparation for adults being baptised at Easter, and only over maybe three weeks. Today's longer Lent is for baptised person, to prepare to commemorate our baptism, our sharing the Lord's paschal (or Easter) mystery for the first time.

The early form of the forty days offered forty days of fasting (Monday to Saturday) and a vegan diet for both the 40 weekdays and the Sundays. We are all more conscious of intermittent fasting and removing certain food types from our diet in our to achieve certain effects on our minds and bodies. A vegan diet - which we call abstinence from meat - was chosen as it encouraged less sexual desire, an aspect of our lives which can have significant lifelong effects. One meal per day taken in the evening - much more challenging than Ramadan's eat all you like at night - was the first intermittent fasting of Christians. In time, we all know, Western Lent was attenuated with the possibility of two additional snacks during the day; and finally in the 1960s the frequency of intermittent fasting was reduced for Roman Catholics from every weekday of Lent (40 days) to only two days: Ash Wednesday and Good Friday. Now our Lenten vegan diet and 40 days of severe intermittent fasting have disappeared among Roman Catholics because our lifestyles - operating machinery, practicing medicine, etc. - required the change. But it is the fast of Ramadan, much easier than the original Christian Lenten fast, which fascinates our society.

Our forty days, or six Sundays, with their diets for training mind and body, are to lead us to commemorate our sharing the Lord's Easter mystery in baptism, to discipline ourselves to be more like him. Lent is for discipline, not giving up sin temporarily, but discipline to become more like Christ and share his life.

What are you doing for Sixmass or Fortymass this year?
